BURGER KING® FUNDRAISING EFFORTS GENERATE NEARLY FIVE MILLION RAND FOR LITERACY THROUGH THE BURGER KING McLamore(SM) FOUNDATION

Funds will benefit Foundation South Africa partner Room to Read

MIAMI - June 26, 2014 - Many more South African children will have access to libraries and books thanks to the generosity of the extended BURGER KING® family-employees, franchisees and guests-in-the-Europe, Middle East and Africa (EMEA) region.

Burger King Corporation (BKC) and BK® South Africa executives were in attendance Tuesday, at the BURGER KING® flagship restaurant in Cape Town, to present a $485,403 (over ZAR 5 million) donation to the BURGER KING McLAMORE(SM) Foundation's South Africa partner, Room to Read. Along with support from BURGER KING® employees and franchisees in the region, guests across the U.K., Spain and Germany helped raise money throughout 2013 to benefit Room to Read and to fund libraries and publish local language books in Mpumalanga and Limpopo.

Jose Cil, president, Burger King Corporation, Europe, Middle East and Africa, explained the importance of the brand’s commitment to education and the partnership between Room to Read and the BURGER KING McLAMORE(SM) Foundation in South Africa.

"Through our partnership with Room to Read, we are able to help children in Southern Africa learn to read and have an opportunity to continue their education," Mr. Cil said. "We began our partnership with Room to Read in late 2012 and, 18 months later, I'm extremely proud of the work we've done together so far - donating close to half a million dollars toward the establishment of 23 libraries and printing two book titles."

Mr. Cil was joined by Jaye Sinclair chief executive officer of BK® South Africa and Hassen Adams, chairman of BK® South Africa, as he presented the donation to Room to Read Literacy Director of South Africa Vanessa Francis.

"It is important for us to have a partner like Burger King as their investment helps us to bring literacy and the love of reading to thousands of children in South Africa," Ms. Francis said.

The BURGER KING McLAMORE(SM) Foundation partnered with Room to Read in 2012 to help promote literacy in South Africa. Since then, the Foundation has donated close to $500,000 and helped fund 23 libraries and two local language books in South Africa. The Foundation has committed to give an additional $500,000 to Room to Read in 2014, which will help establish four libraries in Zambia, construct two, three-room schools in Tanzania, and one local language publication and establish literate environments in four schools in South Africa.
